

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

$3 and $4 Crepe BLOUSES

(Model Shown)

$1.98

Others are selling these same waists at $3 and $4. The model shown is of last week's design. It is a crepe blouse with a high collar, long sleeves, and a full skirt. The model is wearing a white crepe blouse with a high collar, long sleeves, and a full skirt. The model is wearing a white crepe blouse with a high collar, long sleeves, and a full skirt. The model is wearing a white crepe blouse with a high collar, long sleeves, and a full skirt.

Kaufmann & Co.
The Store of To-Day and To-Morrow

Miss Hill, daughter of the late Alfred Hill, became the bride of William Gathright, of this city. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. George E. Gathright, pastor of the First Baptist Church, and only the nearest relatives and a few intimate friends of the bride and groom were present. The bride wore a smart going-away gown of blue cloth, with a hat to match, and carried a bouquet of pink sweet peas. Mrs. Gathright, an aunt of the bride, was of honor, and wore a gown of blue cloth, with a hat to match, and carried a bouquet of pink sweet peas.

Some of the Richmond teachers attending the International Kindergarten convention in Washington this week are Misses Florence Stewart, Zella Tolbert, Alice Moncre, O'Brien, Georgia Ryland, Bullock, Mary Garland Todd, Edith McCarthy, Gilliam, Clemmitt, Nece, Fox, Bernice Brauer, Lucy Coleman and some of the members of the senior class of the Richmond Training School for Kindergartners. They left Richmond Monday, and will remain in Washington until Saturday afternoon. A number of social functions are to be given in honor of the delegates attending this meeting in Washington, and yesterday afternoon they were received by President Wilson at the White House.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Parrish, of Fluvanna County, announce the engagement of their daughter, Annie James, to Philip J. Duke, of Hanover County. The marriage will be celebrated sometime in the month of June.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Parrish, of Fluvanna County, announce the engagement of their daughter, Annie James, to Philip J. Duke, of Hanover County. The marriage will be celebrated sometime in the month of June.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Parrish, of Fluvanna County, announce the engagement of their daughter, Annie James, to Philip J. Duke, of Hanover County. The marriage will be celebrated sometime in the month of June.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Parrish, of Fluvanna County, announce the engagement of their daughter, Annie James, to Philip J. Duke, of Hanover County. The marriage will be celebrated sometime in the month of June.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Parrish, of Fluvanna County, announce the engagement of their daughter, Annie James, to Philip J. Duke, of Hanover County. The marriage will be celebrated sometime in the month of June.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Parrish, of Fluvanna County, announce the engagement of their daughter, Annie James, to Philip J. Duke, of Hanover County. The marriage will be celebrated sometime in the month of June.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Parrish, of Fluvanna County, announce the engagement of their daughter, Annie James, to Philip J. Duke, of Hanover County. The marriage will be celebrated sometime in the month of June.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Parrish, of Fluvanna County, announce the engagement of their daughter, Annie James, to Philip J. Duke, of Hanover County. The marriage will be celebrated sometime in the month of June.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Parrish, of Fluvanna County, announce the engagement of their daughter, Annie James, to Philip J. Duke, of Hanover County. The marriage will be celebrated sometime in the month of June.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Parrish, of Fluvanna County, announce the engagement of their daughter, Annie James, to Philip J. Duke, of Hanover County. The marriage will be celebrated sometime in the month of June.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Parrish, of Fluvanna County, announce the engagement of their daughter, Annie James, to Philip J. Duke, of Hanover County. The marriage will be celebrated sometime in the month of June.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Parrish, of Fluvanna County, announce the engagement of their daughter, Annie James, to Philip J. Duke, of Hanover County. The marriage will be celebrated sometime in the month of June.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Parrish, of Fluvanna County, announce the engagement of their daughter, Annie James, to Philip J. Duke, of Hanover County. The marriage will be celebrated sometime in the month of June.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Parrish, of Fluvanna County, announce the engagement of their daughter, Annie James, to Philip J. Duke, of Hanover County. The marriage will be celebrated sometime in the month of June.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Parrish, of Fluvanna County, announce the engagement of their daughter, Annie James, to Philip J. Duke, of Hanover County. The marriage will be celebrated sometime in the month of June.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Parrish, of Fluvanna County, announce the engagement of their daughter, Annie James, to Philip J. Duke, of Hanover County. The marriage will be celebrated sometime in the month of June.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Parrish, of Fluvanna County, announce the engagement of their daughter, Annie James, to Philip J. Duke, of Hanover County. The marriage will be celebrated sometime in the month of June.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Parrish, of Fluvanna County, announce the engagement of their daughter, Annie James, to Philip J. Duke, of Hanover County. The marriage will be celebrated sometime in the month of June.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Parrish, of Fluvanna County, announce the engagement of their daughter, Annie James, to Philip J. Duke, of Hanover County. The marriage will be celebrated sometime in the month of June.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Parrish, of Fluvanna County, announce the engagement of their daughter, Annie James, to Philip J. Duke, of Hanover County. The marriage will be celebrated sometime in the month of June.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Parrish, of Fluvanna County, announce the engagement of their daughter, Annie James, to Philip J. Duke, of Hanover County. The marriage will be celebrated sometime in the month of June.

be one of the most interesting events of the late spring season.

Another charity function is a "Clipping Party" to take place at the home of Mrs. L. N. Burgess, 1330 West Main Street, this evening from 8 to 11 o'clock. Mrs. R. F. Gaskins and Mrs. R. C. Hawkins are directing this event, which is for the Hanover Avenue Christian Church, and the public is cordially invited to attend.

There will be a benefit performance given for the Fresh Air School by the Valentine Kindergarten Club at the John Marshall High School this evening at 8 o'clock. The entertainment will be in the form of a Lilliputian wedding, and there will be a number of musical selections as well. Married in Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Farborough announce the marriage of their daughter, Alma, to A. R. Hefebower, the wedding having taken place in Washington, on Friday, April 26.

After May 1 Mr. and Mrs. Hefebower will be at home to their friends at 2057 West Main Street, in this city.

Mr. Patterson Attends Luncheon. Mrs. A. M. Patterson was hostess at a luncheon Tuesday at the Grafton, in Washington. The walls of the room in which the luncheon was served were decorated with boughs of blooming dogwood, and the round table was decorated with yellow anemones. Mrs. Patterson's guests were Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall, Mrs. Albert Sidney Burleson, Mrs. Joseph Daniels, Miss Jessie Wilson, Mrs. Willard Saulsbury, Mrs. Oscar Underwood, Mrs. Patterson, of Richmond; Mrs. J. Kemp Barrett, of Baltimore; Mrs. Frederick A. Levering, Jr., of Baltimore; Mrs. Burton Harrison, Mrs. George E. Hamilton, Mrs. Thomas H. Tallaferra, Mrs. Arthur Giles, Miss Charlotte Campbell, Mrs. Perry Belmont, Mrs. James R. Blakely, Mr. Charles Lowndes, and Mrs. W. H. Gordon.

Quiet Wedding. A quiet wedding took place on Tuesday afternoon at 5 o'clock, when Mrs. William Franklin Jones, of this city, was married to William Buchanan, and only the nearest relatives of the bride and groom were present.

Monthly Business Meeting. The regular monthly business meeting of the Equal Suffrage League of Virginia will be held at headquarters, 300 East Broad Street, this afternoon at 5 o'clock. The meeting will be held over by Mrs. B. B. Valentine and reports from committees will be heard, as well as the monthly business report. All members of the league are expected to be present at the meeting this afternoon.

In and Out of Town. Miss Leta Drake, of Easton, Pa., is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Baskerville, of 11 West Franklin Street.

Miss Theresa Nurney has returned from Catonsville, Md., where she attended the Anderson-Downes wedding on Saturday.

Miss Lettie Woodward has gone to the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cochran.

Mr. Robert Davy Eaglesfield and her small son will arrive in Richmond to-day for a short visit before returning to their home in Indianapolis.

Miss Carrie Leftwich has returned to her home after a short stay with friends in Fredericksburg.

Miss Estelle Kain has returned to the city, after spending several months with relatives in Washington.

Henry W. Rountree has returned to the city, after a visit to his daughter, Mrs. Ernest B. Crawford, in Harrisonburg.

Mrs. Henry Wood and her sister, the Baroness J. M. von Kretschman, who have been in Richmond and New York for the past month, have returned to Baltimore.

Miss Julia Langhorne Cone expects to go abroad this summer chaperoned by Miss Sallie Deane.

Dr. and Mrs. L. McLane Tiffany have closed their town residence in Baltimore, and are now occupying their country place in Virginia for two months.

Miss Janet Rishell, who has been the guest of Miss Florence Rex here, has returned to her home in Alexandria.

Church to Be Rededicated. [Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Harrisonburg, Va., April 30.—An announcement is made to-day that the Fellowship Methodist Church, which has been recently rebuilt, will be rededicated on June 15. Fellowship is one of the oldest houses of worship in the city. Rev. Dr. B. W. Bond, presiding elder, will have charge of the services, assisted by the pastor, Rev. G. W. Richardson.

Salvation Army Will Call for Old Periodicals, Clothes and Furniture. Seeing that it is getting a general cleaning, the Salvation Army offers to make collections at homes for old magazines, newspapers, old clothes and furniture that have been stored away for years. The hiring wagons to collect these goods each morning during clean-up week.

South Richmond Bank (Inc.), Chestfield County, post-office, South Richmond, Va. Capital, $100,000; minimum, $25,000. Officers: President, J. N. Walker, first vice-president, J. N. Williams, second vice-president, J. N. Williams, secretary, J. N. Williams, treasurer, J. N. Williams.

Wildwood Canning Company (Inc.), Wildwood, Va. Capital, $100,000; minimum, $25,000. Officers: President, J. N. Walker, first vice-president, J. N. Williams, second vice-president, J. N. Williams, secretary, J. N. Williams, treasurer, J. N. Williams.

Amendment was issued to the charter of Highland Park Electric Corporation of Richmond, increasing its capital stock from $21,000 to $100,000.

THIRTY OF THE SIXTY-FIVE ACCEPT TERMS OF MILL OWNERS. [Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Fayetteville, N. C., April 30.—Fifteen of the striking weavers at the Holt-Morgan cotton mills returned to work to-day on the mill owners' terms. This makes thirty of the sixty-five strikers who have voluntarily returned. Superintendent J. J. Maloney said to-day he had information that the bulk of the remaining strikers were about ready to come back and would be back within a few days. A few of the younger men have left the Holt-Morgan village to seek employment elsewhere.

ONE NEGRO SHOTS ANOTHER. Dead Man Receives Bullet Probably Intended for Police Officer. [Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Lexington, Va., April 30.—Percy Jones shot and killed John Wise last night. Both are colored. The supposition is that Jones attempted to kill Police Officer White, who was with Wise, attempting to catch Jones in a liquor den. The shooting occurred in a dark alley at 9:30 o'clock, and Wise died at 3 o'clock. At the coroner's inquest this morning Jones was charged with the shooting. He is in jail.

Jones is a son of Charles D. Jones, who has figured in court several times, charged with running "blind" tiger. Jones is about twenty years old, and Wise was thirty years old. Both have families.

Use Pratt's Astraal Oil for Incubators. N. Klein & Son, Inc. 620 East Broad.

New Process Gas Ranges $12.50 and Up. Jones Bros. & Co., Inc. 1420 E. Main St.

Daisy Bread AT ALL GROCERS Save The Labels and Get Valuable Premiums AMERICAN BREAD AND BAKING CO. 8 East Leigh Street

Windor Ties

In crepe de chine, in all the new and popular colors, 50c. Surah Silk Windors, in all the wanted shades, 25c.

CAMPAIGN TO LAST TWO DAYS LONGER

Y. M. C. A. Workers Will Endeavor to Enroll 500 New Members.

By a unanimous vote the workers in the Young Men's Christian Association membership campaign decided last night to prolong the campaign two more days, in order, if possible, to add a full 500 names to the rolls of the association.

Reports turned in at the supper attended by the workers last night showed that 273 new members have already been secured. Captain Northrup, who heads one of the leading teams, moved that the effort be continued, as there is still plenty of material available. Accordingly, the campaign will last until Friday night.

There is close rivalry between the various teams, several of which are running up big totals. Captain A. J. Smith, who heads the last team, thirty-four new men to the credit of his team. Captain R. C. Hawkins is second with thirty-three, and Captain P. H. Gray is third with thirty-two. The captains of the other teams and their records are as follows:

W. A. Berryman, 11; H. B. Buge, 16; F. R. Dappick, 19; L. A. Day, 3; C. G. Harris, 4; H. R. Northrup, 16; George D. Richardson, 26; A. B. Fyle, 17; E. F. Schmidt, 16; W. S. Seaman, Jr., 9; Thomas D. Steel, 16; W. L. Wills, 17.

BONGI SURE TO PLEASE CROWDS

In Opinion of Many, World's Greatest Lyric Tenor Will Sing Here.

Signor Alessandro Bonci, considered by many the greatest lyric tenor in the world, will give a long and generous program when he appears as one of the many artists engaged for the musical festival of the Wednesday Club, Monday and Tuesday.

Bonci comes from a very gifted family. His maternal grandfather was a noted tenor, whose name was Teccchi, and who was known throughout Italy. His mother, Madame Bonci, had a beautiful soprano voice in youth, and sang in public, but a large family soon put an end to that, and she turned to her native talent as a singer. Bonci's brothers are singers, one a tenor, the other a baritone, and both appear in grand opera exclusively. The baritone sang second roles with the Metropolitan Opera Company for many seasons ago. But even among these talented brothers there is but one incomparable Bongi, the one who will appear here. A rival of Caruso, he is equally as popular on the concert stage.

ARMY TO CLEAN UP. Salvations Army Will Call for Old Periodicals, Clothes and Furniture.

Seeing that it is getting a general cleaning, the Salvation Army offers to make collections at homes for old magazines, newspapers, old clothes and furniture that have been stored away for years. The hiring wagons to collect these goods each morning during clean-up week.

South Richmond Bank (Inc.), Chestfield County, post-office, South Richmond, Va. Capital, $100,000; minimum, $25,000. Officers: President, J. N. Walker, first vice-president, J. N. Williams, second vice-president, J. N. Williams, secretary, J. N. Williams, treasurer, J. N. Williams.

Wildwood Canning Company (Inc.), Wildwood, Va. Capital, $100,000; minimum, $25,000. Officers: President, J. N. Walker, first vice-president, J. N. Williams, second vice-president, J. N. Williams, secretary, J. N. Williams, treasurer, J. N. Williams.

Amendment was issued to the charter of Highland Park Electric Corporation of Richmond, increasing its capital stock from $21,000 to $100,000.

THIRTY OF THE SIXTY-FIVE ACCEPT TERMS OF MILL OWNERS. [Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Fayetteville, N. C., April 30.—Fifteen of the striking weavers at the Holt-Morgan cotton mills returned to work to-day on the mill owners' terms. This makes thirty of the sixty-five strikers who have voluntarily returned. Superintendent J. J. Maloney said to-day he had information that the bulk of the remaining strikers were about ready to come back and would be back within a few days. A few of the younger men have left the Holt-Morgan village to seek employment elsewhere.

ONE NEGRO SHOTS ANOTHER. Dead Man Receives Bullet Probably Intended for Police Officer. [Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Lexington, Va., April 30.—Percy Jones shot and killed John Wise last night. Both are colored. The supposition is that Jones attempted to kill Police Officer White, who was with Wise, attempting to catch Jones in a liquor den. The shooting occurred in a dark alley at 9:30 o'clock, and Wise died at 3 o'clock. At the coroner's inquest this morning Jones was charged with the shooting. He is in jail.

Jones is a son of Charles D. Jones, who has figured in court several times, charged with running "blind" tiger. Jones is about twenty years old, and Wise was thirty years old. Both have families.

Use Pratt's Astraal Oil for Incubators. N. Klein & Son, Inc. 620 East Broad.

New Process Gas Ranges $12.50 and Up. Jones Bros. & Co., Inc. 1420 E. Main St.

Daisy Bread AT ALL GROCERS Save The Labels and Get Valuable Premiums AMERICAN BREAD AND BAKING CO. 8 East Leigh Street

Use Pratt's Astraal Oil for Incubators. N. Klein & Son, Inc. 620 East Broad.

New Process Gas Ranges $12.50 and Up. Jones Bros. & Co., Inc. 1420 E. Main St.

Daisy Bread AT ALL GROCERS Save The Labels and Get Valuable Premiums AMERICAN BREAD AND BAKING CO. 8 East Leigh Street

Use Pratt's Astraal Oil for Incubators. N. Klein & Son, Inc. 620 East Broad.

New Process Gas Ranges $12.50 and Up. Jones Bros. & Co., Inc. 1420 E. Main St.

Daisy Bread AT ALL GROCERS Save The Labels and Get Valuable Premiums AMERICAN BREAD AND BAKING CO. 8 East Leigh Street

Use Pratt's Astraal Oil for Incubators. N. Klein & Son, Inc. 620 East Broad.

New Process Gas Ranges $12.50 and Up. Jones Bros. & Co., Inc. 1420 E. Main St.

Daisy Bread AT ALL GROCERS Save The Labels and Get Valuable Premiums AMERICAN BREAD AND BAKING CO. 8 East Leigh Street

MAY DAY WELCOMED AS POPULAR FESTIVAL

Observed as Marking End of Winter Season—How Celebrated To-Day.

BY LA MARQUISE DE FONTENAY.

UNTIL about twenty years ago, May Day, which we celebrate to-day, was welcomed by people of every degree on both sides of the Atlantic, as one of the most popular of public festivals, the origin of which dates back many hundreds and possibly thousands of years prior to the Christian era. It was observed as marking the end of the winter season, with all its hardships and trials, and as signaling the advent of the summer, with relief from all the sufferings of the bleak, preceding months.

Classes and masses may be said to have united in their celebration of the day. The poorer people went a-maying, and I can still recall in England the maypoles and the Jack-in-the-green, the latter consisting of a gigantic sort of bottle-shaped wicker-work arrangement, densely covered with evergreen foliage and spring blossoms, which would gyrate and dance on the village common and along the roads, even in the London suburbs, and the people of the town from within, who were entirely concealed from view.

Public parks were crowded with children, to whom the holiday was especially dear, and in Vienna, as well as in many other capitals of Europe, there was a coronation of the queen of the flowers, the members of the court, the great nobles and grand monde, all carriages and horses being gaily decorated with flowers and ribbons, while the fair occupants of the turnouts appeared for the occasion in the daintiest and most attractive of their spring finery.

The spectacle thus provided by the world, far from exciting sentiments of envy and ill-will on the part of the people on foot, was on the contrary, always regarded by the latter as one of the most interesting and attractive features of the holiday; an important element, indeed, of their May Day celebration.

All this is changed, however, during the last two decades. May Day has ceased to be a universal holiday, and instead has developed into an annual manifestation of all the bitter hate which modern capitalism has succeeded in arousing on the part of the laboring and unemployed masses against their more fortunate fellow citizens. May Day has now come to be looked upon in Europe at any rate as a moment of popular disturbances, of sanguinary disorders, of attempted outrage, and of mob attacks upon law, order and property.

Troops to-day will be kept under arms from morning till night in the leading capitals of the Old World, and the great manufacturing and industrial cities and towns. The police, strongly reinforced, will be on the qui vive from dawn, and it is only when the day has passed uneventfully that the authorities chosen by their respective nations to maintain the observance of the law and to protect life and property, will be able to relax their vigilance, and to congratulate themselves on the fact that another of these May Days—now the most ill-omened holiday of the year in Europe—has passed and gone.

King George of Greece has left not only a will disposing of his property, but also a sort of political testament to his sons, for the guidance of their conduct, which deserves brief reference here for the light which it sheds upon his understanding of the role of monarchy and incidentally also of the Greek character. He traces his lineage to his grandfather, King Constantine, to be courageous, and, above all, extremely patient, and to remember that he is reigning over a Southern people, who are prone to excitement and anger, and who then say and do things on momentary impulse, which they have all forgotten about on the following day. It is better that the King should suffer distress than either the people or the country. The interest of these two must always be superior in the King's eyes to every other consideration. He requests King Constantine to see that his children and any grandchildren that he may have receive an essentially Greek education, so that they might be Greeks and nothing else. He urges him to love Greece, and to see to it and his people, and to have confidence in both. He entrusts his sons always to remain united, asks forgiveness of

King George of Greece has left not only a will disposing of his property, but also a sort of political testament to his sons, for the guidance of their conduct, which deserves brief reference here for the light which it sheds upon his understanding of the role of monarchy and incidentally also of the Greek character. He traces his lineage to his grandfather, King Constantine, to be courageous, and, above all, extremely patient, and to remember that he is reigning over a Southern people, who are prone to excitement and anger, and who then say and do things on momentary impulse, which they have all forgotten about on the following day. It is better that the King should suffer distress than either the people or the country. The interest of these two must always be superior in the King's eyes to every other consideration. He requests King Constantine to see that his children and any grandchildren that he may have receive an essentially Greek education, so that they might be Greeks and nothing else. He urges him to love Greece, and to see to it and his people, and to have confidence in both. He entrusts his sons always to remain united, asks forgiveness of

King George of Greece has left not only a will disposing of his property, but also a sort of political testament to his sons, for the guidance of their conduct, which deserves brief reference here for the light which it sheds upon his understanding of the role of monarchy and incidentally also of the Greek character. He traces his lineage to his grandfather, King Constantine, to be courageous, and, above all, extremely patient, and to remember that he is reigning over a Southern people, who are prone to excitement and anger, and who then say and do things on momentary impulse, which they have all forgotten about on the following day. It is better that the King should suffer distress than either the people or the country. The interest of these two must always be superior in the King's eyes to every other consideration. He requests King Constantine to see that his children and any grandchildren that he may have receive an essentially Greek education, so that they might be Greeks and nothing else. He urges him to love Greece, and to see to it and his people, and to have confidence in both. He entrusts his sons always to remain united, asks forgiveness of

King George of Greece has left not only a will disposing of his property, but also a sort of political testament to his sons, for the guidance of their conduct, which deserves brief reference here for the light which it sheds upon his understanding of the role of monarchy and incidentally also of the Greek character. He traces his lineage to his grandfather, King Constantine, to be courageous, and, above all, extremely patient, and to remember that he is reigning over a Southern people, who are prone to excitement and anger, and who then say and do things on momentary impulse, which they have all forgotten about on the following day. It is better that the King should suffer distress than either the people or the country. The interest of these two must always be superior in the King's eyes to every other consideration. He requests King Constantine to see that his children and any grandchildren that he may have receive an essentially Greek education, so that they might be Greeks and nothing else. He urges him to love Greece, and to see to it and his people, and to have confidence in both. He entrusts his sons always to remain united, asks forgiveness of

King George of Greece has left not only a will disposing of his property, but also a sort of political testament to his sons, for the guidance of their conduct, which deserves brief reference here for the light which it sheds upon his understanding of the role of monarchy and incidentally also of the Greek character. He traces his lineage to his grandfather, King Constantine, to be courageous, and, above all, extremely patient, and to remember that he is reigning over a Southern people, who are prone to excitement and anger, and who then say and do things on momentary impulse, which they have all forgotten about on the following day. It is better that the King should suffer distress than either the people or the country. The interest of these two must always be superior in the King's eyes to every other consideration. He requests King Constantine to see that his children and any grandchildren that he may have receive an essentially Greek education, so that they might be Greeks and nothing else. He urges him to love Greece, and to see to it and his people, and to have confidence in both. He entrusts his sons always to remain united, asks forgiveness of

King George of Greece has left not only a will disposing of his property, but also a sort of political testament to his sons, for the guidance of their conduct, which deserves brief reference here for the light which it sheds upon his understanding of the role of monarchy and incidentally also of the Greek character. He traces his lineage to his grandfather, King Constantine, to be courageous, and, above all, extremely patient, and to remember that he is reigning over a Southern people, who are prone to excitement and anger, and who then say and do things on momentary impulse, which they have all forgotten about on the following day. It is better that the King should suffer distress than either the people or the country. The interest of these two must always be superior in the King's eyes to every other consideration. He requests King Constantine to see that his children and any grandchildren that he may have receive an essentially Greek education, so that they might be Greeks and nothing else. He urges him to love Greece, and to see to it and his people, and to have confidence in both. He entrusts his sons always to remain united, asks forgiveness of

King George of Greece has left not only a will disposing of his property, but also a sort of political testament to his sons, for the guidance of their conduct, which deserves brief reference here for the light which it sheds upon his understanding of the role of monarchy and incidentally also of the Greek character. He traces his lineage to his grandfather, King Constantine, to be courageous, and, above all, extremely patient, and to remember that he is reigning over a Southern people, who are prone to excitement and anger, and who then say and do things on momentary impulse, which they have all forgotten about on the following day. It is better that the King should suffer distress than either the people or the country. The interest of these two must always be superior in the King's eyes to every other consideration. He requests King Constantine to see that his children and any grandchildren that he may have receive an essentially Greek education, so that they might be Greeks and nothing else. He urges him to love Greece, and to see to it and his people, and to have confidence in both. He entrusts his sons always to remain united, asks forgiveness of

King George of Greece has left not only a will disposing of his property, but also a sort of political testament to his sons, for the guidance of their conduct, which deserves brief reference here for the light which it sheds upon his understanding of the role of monarchy and incidentally also of the Greek character. He traces his lineage to his grandfather, King Constantine, to be courageous, and, above all, extremely patient, and to remember that he is reigning over a Southern people, who are prone to excitement and anger, and who then say and do things on momentary impulse, which they have all forgotten about on the following day. It is better that the King should suffer distress than either the people or the country. The interest of these two must always be superior in the King's eyes to every other consideration. He requests King Constantine to see that his children and any grandchildren that he may have receive an essentially Greek education, so that they might be Greeks and nothing else. He urges him to love Greece, and to see to it and his people, and to have confidence in both. He entrusts his sons always to remain united, asks forgiveness of

King George of Greece has left not only a will disposing of his property, but also a sort of political testament to his sons, for the guidance of their conduct, which deserves brief reference here for the light which it sheds upon his understanding of the role of monarchy and incidentally also of the Greek character. He traces his lineage to his grandfather, King Constantine, to be courageous, and, above all, extremely patient, and to remember that he is reigning over a Southern people, who are prone to excitement and anger, and who then say and do things on momentary impulse, which they have all forgotten about on the following day. It is better that the King should suffer distress than either the people or the country. The interest of these two must always be superior in the King's eyes to every other consideration. He requests King Constantine to see that his children and any grandchildren that he may have receive an essentially Greek education, so that they might be Greeks and nothing else. He urges him to love Greece, and to see to it and his people, and to have confidence in both. He entrusts his sons always to remain united, asks forgiveness of

King George of Greece has left not only a will disposing of his property, but also a sort of political testament to his sons, for the guidance of their conduct, which deserves brief reference here for the light which it sheds upon his understanding of the role of monarchy and incidentally also of the Greek character. He traces his lineage to his grandfather, King Constantine, to be courageous, and, above all, extremely patient, and to remember that he is reigning over a Southern people, who are prone to excitement and anger, and who then say and do things on momentary impulse, which they have all forgotten about on the following day. It is better that the King should suffer distress than either the people or the country. The interest of these two must always be superior in the King's eyes to every other consideration. He requests King Constantine to see that his children and any grandchildren that he may have receive an essentially Greek education, so that they might be Greeks and nothing else. He urges him to love Greece, and to see to it and his people, and to have confidence in both. He entrusts his sons always to remain united, asks forgiveness of

King George of Greece has left not only a will disposing of his property, but also a sort of political testament to his sons, for the guidance of their conduct, which deserves brief reference here for the light which it sheds upon his understanding of the role of monarchy and incidentally also of the Greek character. He traces his lineage to his grandfather, King Constantine, to be courageous, and, above all, extremely patient, and to remember that he is reigning over a Southern people, who are prone to excitement and anger, and who then say and do things on momentary impulse, which they have all forgotten about on the following day. It is better that the King should suffer distress than either the people or the country. The interest of these two must always be superior in the King's eyes to every other consideration. He requests King Constantine to see that his children and any grandchildren that he may have receive an essentially Greek education, so that they might be Greeks and nothing else. He urges him to love Greece, and to see to it and his people, and to have confidence in both. He entrusts his sons always to remain united, asks forgiveness of

King George of Greece has left not only a will disposing of his property, but also a sort of political testament to his sons, for the guidance of their conduct, which deserves brief reference here for the light which it sheds upon his understanding of the role of monarchy and incidentally also of the Greek character. He traces his lineage to his grandfather, King Constantine, to be courageous, and, above all, extremely patient, and to remember that he is reigning over a Southern people, who are prone to excitement and anger, and who then say and do things on momentary impulse, which they have all forgotten about on the following day. It is better that the King should suffer distress than either the people or the country. The interest of these two must always be superior in the King's eyes to every other consideration. He requests King Constantine to see that his children and any grandchildren that he may have receive an essentially Greek education, so that they might be Greeks and nothing else. He urges him to love Greece, and to see to it and his people, and to have confidence in both. He entrusts his sons always to remain united, asks forgiveness of

King George of Greece has left not only a will disposing of his property, but also a sort of political testament to his sons, for the guidance of their conduct, which deserves brief reference here for the light which it sheds upon his understanding of the role of monarchy and incidentally also of the Greek character. He traces his lineage to his grandfather, King Constantine, to be courageous, and, above all, extremely patient, and to remember that he is reigning over a Southern people, who are prone to excitement and anger, and who then say and do things on momentary impulse, which they have all forgotten about on the following day. It is better that the King should suffer distress than either the people or the country. The interest of these two must always be superior in the King's eyes to every other consideration. He requests King Constantine to see that his children and any grandchildren that he may have receive an essentially